Stenden University of Applied Sciences (formerly known as CHN) with its main campus in Leeuwarden, is a dynamic and truly international institute. With approximately 10,000 students of which 25% is coming from outside the Netherlands. Stenden University has a campus in South Africa which offers full degree programs in Disaster Management and Hospitality Management.

Stenden South Africa is a unique Higher Education Institution in the seaside town of Port Alfred. Established in 2001, we pride ourselves with an impressive track record of top quality higher education.

Stenden South Africa has more than 11,000 students, with 95 different nationalities studying at the different campus sites. Stenden University of Applied Sciences offers 21 bachelors programs and 5 masters programs.

Stenden University has a long and diverse history of academic performance. Its teacher training degree programme goes back over 100 years. However, Stenden is anything but an old fashioned University. As the turn of the century was approaching, Stenden (back then operating under the name CHN University) chose to launch a pioneering concept known as 'Grand Tour'.

The Grand Tour is an old European custom whereby youngsters were encouraged to travel and see the World before settling themselves in a career. Stenden had the desire to re-invent this concept and incorporate it in the different degree courses it offers. By establishing international campus sites, our Grand Tour enables students to complete part of their studies in the Netherlands as well as other campus sites in Bali, Doha & Bangkok. We are able to offer a true international education experience!
